CINCINNATI, MONDAY, JUNE 27.

CORRESPONDENCE, containing important news, selected from any quarter of the world. NO NOTICE taken of anonymous correspondence. We do not return rejected communications.

We desire to render special acknowledgments to Mr. Hartwell Locke, of the American Express, for his unremitting attention in delivering papers and packages at an early date, forwarded in his care.

The Principle of War.

The microscope reveals to us in a drop of water thousands of infusoria fighting and devouring each other incessantly. The little sphere is but a too faithful miniature of the larger one where the pugnacious infusoria are bipeds. We see that history is mainly a record of wars; and the great items of expense to all nations, are the support of armies and navies. What is the principle of war? What is the secret thread binding the little infusorial animal and the Emperor Napoleon, together in one category? It is all folded in the axiom that "self-preservation is the first law of nature." In the forest the roots of the oak and the roots of the chestnut are in conflict down under earth for the nutriment to be had there; if they be too close, one or the other must be the dwarf or must die, the purpose of each being to perfect itself without reference to the perfection of the other. In all natural life we see the principle at work, each struggling for its own free existence alone and lawfully, only to propagate its own kind. Then we advance to man, but man, as yet, controlled by his primitive and animal nature. We see how the world began, in those who begin the world anew now. In children we find desire, passion, resistance, if they be healthy. Boys, when not fighting one another, set dogs and cocks together in rings. It is the legitimate efflux of the mere unqualified animal nature; but nations also have their passionate childhood. There was a time when war was the normal condition, and peace the exceptional and singular thing. And even now when higher nations overrule this, some crude boy-nations eke out the propensity with bull-baits and the like. We see that it is inherent, because in that realm where no shams can do any permanent work, a nation's religion, the warlike propensities are defiled—Jupiter, Arjoun, Mars, Allah are grand Men of Battle. These childish generations had no higher standard of manliness, self-reliance and endurance, than that. It is said that the Jesuit Missionaries of former times found it impossible to interest the North American Indians in Christianity, until they proclaimed that Jesus was a most extraordinary chieftain, who had, on a single day, taken a thousand scalps.

In childhood one interest works—the desire for happiness, perhaps. This is controlling until, as we grow older, some other motive enters to divide the sway of the first. As years increase interests become more complex. Thus it is that, in early times, nations, finding their happiness to consist in physical supplies, will obtain it by the oppression of weaker nations—the old instinct of prey. Instead of conscience there is hunger; instead of justice there is need of shelter. The palate is the revolutionizer. But other interests begin to stir, and presently awake; man finds later that he cannot live on bread alone; the want of social intercourse, the craving of the religious sentiment, the curiosity of the brain come, one after the other, to divide the empire of the animal. Then Mars has terrible foes.

Let us see how far we have come. Only in Elizabeth's time, out of the European waters, piracy was almost universal. The proverb was "no peace beyond the line;" and the seamen shipped on the buccaner's bargain, "no prey, no pay." In 1588, the celebrated Cavendish, who was thought in his times a good Christian man, wrote thus to Lord Hudson, on his return from a voyage round the world: "September, 1588. It has pleased Almighty God to suffer me to circumpass the whole globe of the world, entering in at the Strait of Magellan and returning by the Cape of Buena Esperanza; in which voyage I have either discovered or brought certain intelligence of all the rich places of the world, which were ever discovered by any Christian. I navigated along the coast of Chili, Peru and New Spain, where I made great spoils. I burnt and sunk nineteen ships of sail, small and great. All the villages and towns I ever landed at, I burned and spoiled, and had I not been discovered on the coast, I had taken great QUANTITY OF TREASURE. The matter of most profit to me was a great ship of the King's, which I took at California, &c. And the good Cavendish piously begins: "It hath pleased Almighty God." Still more recent is the account given in Williams' History of Maine of Assacombuit, the Sagamore of the Agunaticook tribe. He was remarkable for his turpitude and ferocity above all other known Indians. In 1705, Vaudreuil sent him to France where he was introduced to the King. When he appeared at Court he lifted up his hand and said, "this hand has slain a hundred and fifty of your Majesty's enemies within the territories of New England." This so pleased the King that he knighted him and ordered a pension of eighty livres a day to be paid him during life. This valuable person, on his return to America, took to killing his own neighbors and kindred with such appetite, that his tribe combined against him, and would have killed him had he not fled his country forever.

The scandal which we feel in such facts, certainly shows that we have got on a little. All history is the decline of war, though the slow decline; all that society has gained yet, is mitigation—the doctrine of the right of war yet remains; but the sublime question has startled one and another soul in different quarters of the globe: Cannot love be as well as hate? Would not love answer the same end, or even a better? Cannot peace be as well as war?

The idea itself is the epoch; the fact that it has become so distinct to any small number of persons, as to become a subject of prayer and hope, of covert and dissension—that is the commanding fact. This having come, much more will follow. Revolutions go not backward. The star once risen, though only one man in the hemisphere has yet seen its upper limb in the horizon, will mount and mount, until it becomes visible to other men, to multitudes, and climb to the zenith of all eyes. And so it is not a matter of moment how long men refuse to believe the advent of peace; its universal reign is as sure in the future as is the prevalence of civilization over barbarism, liberal governments over feudal forms. The question for us is only, how soon?

War News—New English Ministry.

The "Bremen," four days later from Liverpool, is brimming with news. England indicates a new future as to Austria and Italy. Palmerston, a veteran diplomatist, ardent for France, and urgent that Austria should frankly admit that she is beaten, is Premier of England, with Lord John Russell in the Treasury. Napoleon is not dead as reported, but having gained sufficient honor, in arms, is to return to Paris, in person to direct his rapidly unfolding State policy. Austria finds it too hot for her to keep agents and Ministers in the Papal States. The forces reserved heretofore at Ancona, on the Adriatic, and at Bologna, have been withdrawn. The Austrian army, at Pavia and Piacenza, on the Po, have evacuated their garrisons there, blowing up the fortifications and citadel at the latter place. Lodi, in the same neighborhood, has been abandoned, and the head-quarters of Joseph are at Mantua. A strong line of forts and natural barriers protect the Austrians along the rivers Adige and Minio, where they await the allied forces.

The Great Metternich is Dead!

As Prince, as Duke, as Ambassador, as Privy Counsellor, as President of Council of Ministers for Austria, during all reigns of this century and a portion of the preceding, Metternich has been the great champion of feudalism and aristocracy. He and his father before him were born at Coblenz; each and both lived for Austria, and Austrian policy. Treaties and alliances were made at his dictation, and all the honors of State and titles of distinction his own Emperor could confer on him, were his. He was Knight of all the high orders of Austria. The grand cross of the order of St. Stephen was conferred on him as a Prince on the night before the battle of Leipzig. The locality of the great Hochheim wine—the Johannisberg castle and revenues—was presented to him by the Emperor; he was Grandee of Spain and Duke of Portella, conferred by the King of the Two Sicilies. He who made the treaty years since with Sardinia, by which she agreed to supply Austria with 60,000 men for any war, has now ceased all human diplomacy, and died at the advanced age of eighty-six years.

Local News.

BUSINESS men should remember that prayer-meetings are still held every morning in the basement of the First Presbyterian Church.

The Chicago excursionists held a meeting this afternoon, at 3 o'clock, at Merchants' Exchange.

AFTER next Sabbath, the services by Rev. Mr. Conway in his pulpit, will be interrupted for two months, for the summer vacation.

WE call the attention of our readers to the sale of choice European Paintings, to take place at Pike's Opera House Building tomorrow, commencing at 3 o'clock.

THE soda-water fountains throughout the city were in full blast, yesterday, in open violation of the Sunday ordinance. Thirty humanity must drink, even though the law forbids it.

ALF. BURNETT, Esq., has sent to our office a sample of the wheat spoken of by him in his letter of the 23d inst., from Eaton, Ohio, and which he says was thought to be entirely destroyed by frost, and offered at $2 per acre. On Wednesday last, the owner refused $25 per acre for the same wheat.

A SUNDAY NUDANCE THAT MUST BE ABATED.—Yesterday, the cities of Cincinnati, Covington and Newport were greatly annoyed by the almost constant, hideous noise arising from the steam whistles of the ferry-boats that run up and down the Licking. Will the Mayors of the three cities see that this does not occur again?

CINCINNATI HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.—We do not propose to be present at the weekly meetings of the tillers of the ground, the presiding of flowers and fruits. The men and their specimens on exhibition, are alike worthy of notice. For sixteen years the active members of the society have been devoted friends of the horticulturally, of Cincinnati and the West. By their studies and their labors, they have introduced and perfected the delightful fruits and berries that make our gardens famous. Their improved gardens and orchards furnish our markets with the best vegetables and fruits from the best stocks. They have beautified our homes with sweet flowers of rarity at cheap prices, and our tables bear testimony daily to the worth of their labors. Let us duly prize the active men and women of this society, who never intermit their labors. The society opens its doors to all cultivators of the Western States, and respectfully invites them to join in competing for the prizes, and to aid in its efforts to promote the comfort and happiness of our fellow-citizens. A hand-book of reference, a brief history of the Society, price 15c., gives valuable information as to the Society, and can be obtained of O'ngley & Shain, of this city.

The exhibition on Saturday, was very attractive; the comments and debate were instructive and important. Mr. F. W. Slack, of Ky., has had great success with the Hudson river variety of raspberry, obtaining readily $4 50 per drawer for all he raises. At the meeting next Saturday, he will report amount of produce per acre, and other facts of interest, and will exhibit the plant and fruit. Dr. Warder reported that the American red raspberry of Downing, and the Purple American, or Purple Care, were the most profitable varieties for the market. He presented, in behalf of Mrs. Clarkson, of Kansas, dried specimens of flowers of Amorphia fruticosa and Knothera grandiflora. Dr. Chapman presented some honey-comb, the color of which was as if tinged with soot, and its taste as if of the flowers of the Alanthus tree.

We saw on exhibition fruits and vegetables preserved under ice for some time, by a patent process of Mr. Benj. J. Nyce, of Decatur county, Ind. He explained the process, which was by enclosing them dry, at uniform temperature, and kept cold by it, as not to freeze, in a box or room whose walls are so lined with charcoal as will not conduct heat. We observed some rare specimens of currants, and a branch of the American hop-tree. A number of new members were elected, which is a weekly custom—not a weekly one, thanks to the industry of Mr. Hooper, the Secretary, as the Society is becoming strong in finances, being free of debt, with $233 in the treasury. A valuable report was made, classifying the various apple-trees cultivated in this neighborhood, by their natural form and habit.

Last Saturday night about twelve o'clock, the watchmen in the neighborhood of the corner of Sixth and Broadway were attracted by the cries of a female from one of the upper windows of the building known as the Old England House. She screamed loudly for help, crying "murder," "watchman," etc. Four watchmen soon made their appearance, rushed up stairs, and found the cause of the cries to arise from the fact that an Irishman, name unknown, had been beating his sister-in-law over the head in a most shameful manner. Such offenders as these, when coming before the Police Court, should be dealt with to the full extent of the law. He was arrested and taken to the Hammond-street station-house.

The attention of the pump-man is called to the pump on the corner of Floyd and Gray. Dead rats or some other undrinkable substance has gotten into the water so as to make it smell bad and stink worse.—Louisville Courier.

"The pump-man" has since found—and reported—that a "rat" wishing to do wholesale murder, dropped into the well a copy of the "Louisville Journal." Before giving credit to this, let us hear from Horace Greeley!

YESTERDAY afternoon and evening, our office was besieged by a crowd of anxious enquirers, who had been boaxed by a statement that Louis Napoleon had been killed at Milan. The steamer's news will convince them that he is neither dead nor sleeping.

THE engraving of "THE MORNING HEAD DRESS"—the fashion for July—will be given to-morrow. A press of other matter pressed it out to-day.

NEWPORT NEWS.

Address Newport Reporter, P. O. Box No. 68, Newport, Ky.

THE DAILY PRESS.—Any of the citizens of Newport desiring to subscribe for this paper, can have it delivered at their residences by leaving their names at the Newport Book and Periodical Store, York street, opposite Odd Fellows Hall. Advertisements and communications intended for the Press, will receive prompt attention if left at the above establishment.

MANY of the teamsters of our city are in the habit of obstructing the smaller streets by unloading their wagons on the public thoroughfare, and leaving large piles of wood on the streets for days, without removal. One of these individuals, named Henry Grote, was fined, before his Honor the Mayor, on Saturday last, for obstructing Riskey street.

MANY of our citizens will regret to hear that Morris Shipley recently died in the State of New York. And although he had not been a resident of this place for several years, yet they will remember well his social, quiet and cheerful deportment towards all classes of our citizens.

THE members of the English Catholic Church of our city, are making extensive preparations to celebrate the Fourth of July, by giving a grand excursion on that day.

THE Sunday ordinance was strictly observed throughout the city yesterday, by the retailers of the extract of corn.

THERE is a lime dealer's sign on Monmouth street, near Jefferson, that reads, "Lime, Cement & Hare." The Knight of the brush who did the lettering, says he is not responsible for the spelling. He says, "Being a Dutchman, he did not know English, and got a Justice of the Peace, who lives not two miles off to write it for him," and of (D) Course he followed copy.

On Saturday last L. M. Eckert, Coroner of Campbell Co., held an inquest on the body of George Clinton, a boy eight years old, who was drowned in the Ohio River last Friday night. The verdict of the jury was "accidental drowning." This makes the second child drowned last week.
